

Martin Bradley—
Author Visit
13th November 2014

On the 13th November Wellow was delighted to welcome Martin Bradley to our school. Martin is a local author who in his spare time write books to raise funds for Raptor conservation.

“My books are to raise funds for raptor conservation, it's not a money making exercise just a life long passion. this isn't my profession however we have just sold just over 3000 books in total in a year raising loads of funds.”

Martin spent time with each class talking about how the books came together, the journey, the birds themselves and key words He also held question and answer sessions where the children were fascinated to hear all about how the birds survive.

Many of the pupils brought copies of his books which are also illustrated beautifully by Martin himself. By buying a book the children received a bookmark entitling them to free entrance at the Andover Hawk Conservation so they have been able to follow up their interests with a visit to the real thing!
