

National Trust—September 2016
Jake White New Forest Ranger

The whole school was lucky enough to have a visit from Jake White one of the New Forest Park Rangers. Jake works for the National Trust and runs an out-reach project at Foxbury Estate. Many of our children had planted trees when this development was in fruition so it has a special connection with our school.

Jake talked about the importance of keeping the countryside free from litter, the way we can protect the animals that live there and how vital our new tree planting is to the environment and the world we live in.
