

Wellow 800 – Collaboration with
Mountbatten school

In February, we were pleased to welcome art students from Mountbatten School to Wellow.

Mountbatten pupils had worked on some beautiful wall hangings depicting the saints St Margaret and St George. With the Mountbatten students and art teacher's guidance, our children worked on creating some prints to add to the hangings.

Due to the fact, we are celebrating St Margaret's church 800th year, the children used modern day symbols and patterns as well as medieval designs as the inspiration for their prints. Once completed, the children then used their printing blocks to finish the beautiful wall hangings.

We are really proud of the result and the children relished the opportunity to work with art students from Mountbatten school.
